THREE KILLED AS AUTO RAMS FREIGHT TRAIN

Mansfielders Victims of Crash At B. and O. Crossing Northwest of City.

ONE DIES INSTANTLY

Woman, 25, Two Youths Perish In County's Worst Grade Accident In 16 Months.

Three persons were killed last night when the automobile in which they were riding crashed into a moving freight train at the Baltimore and Ohio crossing, eight miles northwest of Mansfield on State Route 39.

Nathan Thornberry, brother of one of the victims, was the first to reach the scene of the accident. He was riding in another car some distance behind when the accident happened.

The dead, victims of Richland County's worst grade crossing accidents in 16 months, are:

Roy Thornberry, 17, Mansfield, R. D. 1, driver of the car.

Willard Millican, 17, East Fourth street.

Mrs. Thomas L. Harness, 25, of 42 West Second street.

Acting County Coroner Blake Kohler said Millican died instantly from a skull fracture. Thornberry, who suffered chest injuries and fractures of both arms died en route to Shelby Memorial Hospital. Mrs. Harness succumbed 20 minutes after arrival at the hospital. She had a fractured skull and a leg fracture.

State highway patrolmen and Deputy Sheriff J. R. Hetler said the three were driving toward Mansfield at about 11:35 p. m. when the auto plunged into an empty tank car as the train was crossing the highway. The crossing is north of Springmill, just beyond the viaduct which spans the Pennsylvania railroad tracks.

The impact of the crash pushed the car back on the highway, threw Millican and Thornberry out of the vehicle and left Mrs. Harness pinned inside the front seat wreckage.

Fire broke out among the wires and the dashboard. Mrs. Harness'

Eighth Army Opens Heavy New Barrage

Huge Allied Armada Said To Be Steaming East From Gibraltar.

(By Associated Press)

American troops have captured three more "important localities" and seized 200 prisoners on the northern Tunisian battlefront, Allied headquarters said today, while the British First army fell back slightly for the second time in 24 hours along the center of the 100-mile western barrier.

Allied communique No. 176 said exceptionally heavy fighting raged throughout yesterday, with the Germans lashing out in repeated counter-assaults in the critical Medjez-El-Bab zone which guards the open plain before Tunis.

"In one area, our forward troops were forced to make a slight withdrawal, but elsewhere all our positions were firmly held," Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters announced.

Axis reports said Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's big guns were laying down a tremendous barrage along the Enfidaville line in the south—the usual prelude to a new offensive—and simultaneously the Berlin radio declared a huge armada of Allied warships was moving eastward through the Straits of Gibraltar.

Italian headquarters said the Eighth army's bombardment, thundering into Axis mountain defenses at the southern end of the Tunisian coffin corner, was "particularly intense and prolonged."

The war in headlines:

HALTS SALE

State Shuts Off Liquor For 2 Weeks on May 17.

COLUMBUS —(U.P.)— The sale of liquor in Ohio's retail liquor stores will be stopped for a two week period beginning May 17 in order that personnel may begin issuing applications to all registrants, and to permit stocking up, it was learned reliably today.

Applications have been mailed to all retail stores and will be made available to all customers, 21 years of age or over, on Monday. Liquor rationing is expected to begin about June 1.

The state liquor department has 3,000,000 applications printed and has ordered printing of 2,500,000 ration—or "purchase"—books, the first official indication of what total registration might be.

LONDON —(AP)— Admiral Harold R. Stark, commander of U. S. Naval forces in European waters, said today that "slowly but surely we are winning the battle of the Atlantic."

"Far be it from me to belittle what the U-boat has done and is doing," Admiral Stark said. "I know it only too well—but I also know that the U-boat is fighting a losing battle."

PREPARES BROAD PRICE ROLLBACK

Administration Promises Cuts In Food Charges as Reply to Labor.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — The administration today counterattacked organized labor's assault on President Roosevelt's hold-the-line order by preparing a general rollback of "out of hand prices" and promising extension of price controls to all important commodities.

The prices of meats, fresh and canned vegetables, coffee, among others, will be rolled back.

Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown outlined a four-point program designed to establish an equitable balance between wages and the cost of living a few hours before the deadline for the strike of 450,000 soft coalminers.

In addition to extension of price control and the rollback of high prices, Brown proposed to establish specific dollars-and-cents prices for foods so that all—sellers and buyers alike—may know the legal ceiling prices, and to bring the "chiseler, the racketeer and the black market operator" to justice.

Although Brown's program, announced in a radio address, specifically was an answer to John L. Lewis' demands for a $2 a-day wage increase for his miners to meet price rises, it also was an attempt to head off all other major labor oranizations which have served notice that they will seek wage adjustments unless prices

GETS FINGER CAUGHT IN URN

Clevelander Has Trouble When Finger Sticks In Pipe.

CLEVELAND — (U.P.) — It took police, firemen and hospital attendants two hours last night to separate Vertner White, 17, from a coffee urn.

While cleaning the urn at a lunch counter, White caught a finger in a pipe at the bottom of the vessel.

Police and firemen were unsuccessful in removing the finger, so White—with his finger stuck in the urn—was taken to a hospital. Liquid soap finally effected a removal.

GET DAY OFF

German War Workers Observe May Day With Vacation.

(By Associated Press)

Industrial workers in Soviet Russia, the United States and Britain generally passed the traditional May 1 international labor holiday at their machines today to turn out the goods of war, while German working men and women had a day off and conquered European peoples went on at the jobs assigned by their Axis overlords.

The mine wage dispute, however, left thousands idle in United States coal fields.

Dr. Robert Ley, German labor front migister, gave the Germans this slogan in a May Day proclamation: "Accomplishments for the future of our people are our honor." He extolled the "young nations—Germany, Italy and Japan' in a broadcast recorded by the Associated Press.

'RUN' EXHAUSTS MEAT SUPPLIES

Stamp Savers Rush Markets On Final Day, Little Left For Saturday Buying.

Meat rationing doesn't seem to have solved all of the meat problems in Mansfield, most of the city's butchers agreed today.

Counters in meat shops over the city were again nearly emptied yesterday as Mansfield shoppers hurried to use up A, B, C and D red stamps before they became invalid at midnight last night.

Shoppers late last night and today found little meat available since buyers yesterday purchased nearly all supplies.

Shops were busy throughout the day and some purchasers, tired of waiting in line, were heard to mutter such remarks as "I'm not going to get caught like this again."

This referred to the practice of a large number of consumers using stamps sparingly during the early days of their valid period and finding an excess supply at the close. With no meat available to purchase, scores of persons found themselves with a supply of useless stamps when the validity period expired.

Butchers appraised the situation today with such comments as "Not much meat here" and "Just about cleaned out." Some dealers received a supply of meat this morning which helped to relieve the situation.

ROBBER DIES OF GUN WOUNDS

Fugitive Trapped In Restaurant, Succumbs In Hospital.

MARTINS FERRY — (INS) — State and federal officials will be spared the cost of prosecuting Carl Straka, 31-year-old robber who led FBI agents a 10-year chase.

Straka died in a Martins Ferry hospital late yesterday of wounds suffered when he was trapped by G-men April 23. Indicted for robbery of the postoffice building at Glen Robbins, O., Straka had been sought by federal police since he escaped jail at Cambridge in 1933.

Trapped in a Tiltonville restaurant, the fugitive was shot in the side, legs and abdomen by four FBI men.

STATE GUARD GETS CALL TO TORNADO ZONE

21 Mansfielders Respond to Voluntary Mobilization Call; Will Help Farmers.

Responding to its first mobilization order last night, members of Mansfield's Company F unit of the Ohio National Guard left this morning for patrol and rehabilitation duty in tornado-torn rural areas in the Huron-Tiffin district.

Lieut. Charles A. Condon and Second Lieut. Harold P. Spreng were in charge of the contingent which will join with available guardsmen from Cleveland, Toledo, Norwalk, Findlay and Napoleon to help farmers get ready for spring planting in the area hardest hit by the storm.

Only those guardsmen who are not employed in war work were included in the contingent which left in state highway trucks at 8 a. m. for the five-day assignment. Capt Glenn L. Bierly, company commandant, said. Capt. Bierly is among those engaged in war work in the local company's strength of 46, and hence did not respond to the voluntary call.

"I am gratified by the immediate response of such a large percentage of the company's members," Capt. Bierly said. "Such action is a testimonial to the patriotism of the men who are willing to leave private interests to be of service where they are needed more."

Mansfield members in the group included: First Sgt. Harlon E. Tremaine, Sgt. Donald Frampton, Sgt. Winfield Bonnell, Sgt. Howard R. Barnes, Sgt. Robert Worley, Cpl. Clifford C. Warner, Cpl. Harold E. Beams and the following privates, first class, Paul Janes, Claire Bell, Darrell Hudson, Robert St. John, Carl C. Kindt, Charles Edmonstone, Donnell Sale, Earl Muth, Dana Cavin, Walter E. Rusk, Paul Mitchell, Dale Beer, Robert Pealer and Neil Smith.

OVER BY MILLION

War Loan Drive Here Continues to Bring In Dollars.

While the second War Loan drive in Richland County today reached $7,675,717.45, national drive officials expected the 13 billion dollar drive, the largest in history, to top $16,000,000,000.

The county drive is now $1,026,717.45 beyond its original goal of $6,649,000. Incomplete figures show that Mansfield, Shelby and the townships and villages are all over their quotas. Reports on the campaigns of the various townships, the women's division and individual organizations are expected to be completed Monday.

In Washington today Undersecretary of the Treasury Daniel W. Bell, reporting approximately $15,000,000,000 received up until last night, said intensive bond-buying was urged right up until the closing minute of the campaign at midnight tonight.

Burton Says He'll Support Bricker As 'Favorite Son.'

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Sen. Harold H. Burton of Cleveland has added his name to Buckeye legislators pledged to support Ohio's "favorite son" candidate for the 1944 Republican presidential nomination.

Burton told interviewers, who asked about his attitude towards Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio as a possible nominee, that he would follow party tradition backing a favorite son.

President Gives Ickes Full Authority To Produce, Sell, and Distribute Coal, Tells Army to Back Him, Speaks at 10 P. M. Tomorrow.

BULLETIN

NEW YORK—(UP)—John L. Lewis, United Mine Workers president, said today he had "no comment" to make on President Roosevelt's order directing Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes to take possession of all coal mines.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt today directed Secretary of Interior Ickes to take over and operate coal mines which have been struck or are threatened with a strike and directed the secretary of war to provide troop protection for mines and miners who want to work.

Acting two hours after his 10 o'clock deadline had passed, the president instructed Ickes to "make employment available and provide protection to all employes desiring work. . . ."

Mr. Roosevelt's action came in an executive order in which the secretary of war was instructed upon the direction of Ickes "to take such action, if any, as he may deem necessary or desirable to provide protection to all such persons and mines."

Ickes, who is solid fuels director, was instructed to take over and operate the mines, together with "any and all real and personal property, franchises, rights, facilities, funds, and other assets" used in the mining of coal. He was instructed to "operate or arrange for operation" of mines which have struck or are threatened with work stoppages.

President Roosevelt, in his executive order, did not differentiate between soft and hard coal mines, and it was apparent, that his executive order was directed to both divisions of the industry.

Ickes was instructed to "do all things necessary" in order to obtain the production, sale and distribution of coal.

Ickes was further directed by the president's executive order to "make employment available and provide protection to all employes desiring to work at such mines and to all persons seeking employment so far as may be needed."

The action taken by President Roosevelt to assure the production

TOKYO JOYOUS AT COAL STRIKE

Predicts U. S. Steel Mills to Close In Week; Davis Says Japs Almost Right.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Director of War Information Elmer Davis said in his weekly radio review last night that a Tokyo propaganda broadcast saying steel mills will now have to shut down in less than a week contains more truth than what usually comes out of Tokyo.

He said United Mine Workers President John L. Lewis had showed utter disregard for constituted law and order in refusing to deal with the War Labor Board.

"Lewis won't deal with the War Labor Board," he said. "Why? Because the labor board is bound by the law passed by congress last fall, requiring stabilization of wages and prices at the level of Sept. 5."

The action of the miners is cutting off supplies to the fighting

Cupid Only Gets A Bus Ride, All Because of Police

Mansfield police stepped right up to challenge Cupid early today and apparently won the skirmish.

An anxious Cleveland mother called Deskman Gordon H. Drury at police headquarters last night to ask for help in stopping her 17-year-old son and his girl friend, 19, from getting married in Kentucky.

She said she learned the couple had left Cleveland on a Greyhound bus earlier in the evening on their way to Cincinnati and Kentucky. Could the officers do something about it when the couple arrived in Mansfield? she asked.

The officers could and did. When the bus arrived shortly before 1 a. m., Patrolman John Grohol and William Taylor were waiting at the bus station for the altar-bound couple. Despite minor protests, the officers took the youth and his bride-to-be to police headquarters.

The Cleveland parents arrived this morning to take the run-away couple home.

RECEIPTS CLIMB

April Parking Meter Collections Total $3,400.

Revenue from Mansfield parking meters has shown a monthly increase since the first of the year with the April collections topping January figures by $800, L. L. Kochenderfer, meter inspector, said today.

The meters produced $3,400 during the month ending today which topped the April, 1942, receipts by $15 although gasoline rationing was not in effect at this time last year.

Monthly collections so far in 1943 include:

January, $2,655; February, $2,740; March, $3,217, and April $3,400.

Despite the steady gain in recent months, the total collections for the year are still slightly below last year's receipts for the corresponding period, Kochenderfer said.

FAIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

PHOENIX, Ariz. - This was the night of Easter Sunday and a lot of soldiers were in from the flying fields and the camps 'way down in the desert and this one soldier was sitting alone at the bar on a high stool with a bottle of beer in front of him. He was an old guy with a World war ribbon on his shirt and glasses straddling his long nose and hooked over his big ears which stood out from his clipped scalp like flippers. In a corner about five yards away there was a juke box into which other soldiers and girls were pouring nickels, dimes and quarters. It kept up a horrible racket with only brief rest while one record was slid off and the next one dropped into place.

Pegler

The old soldier would slide off his stool every now and again as a record neared its end and tack toward the juke with a nickel in his hand. He was pretty well along in his beer and the going was heavy so by the time he got there someone else would beat him to the coin slot, push a bunch of buttons and send her off again.

He tried to promote some conversation with a marine corporal on the next stool but the marine was a morose individual who probably was fed up on Chateau-Thierry, Cantigny and Soissons and all such places so he gave the soldier a decisive brush-off, so they sat on, side by side but socially apart.

Time after time, the old guy eased himself down off his perch and squared away toward that box with a gleam of anticipation and joy in his eye but always some crazy dame or some lieutenant would be there first. When you drop a quarter in the big slot you get five records in a row and they run about 15 minutes.

Sometimes, when a new number was about to start, he would lift his head hopefully with his little fore and aft cap several degrees out of line, shut his eyes and wait. Then, after the first few bars of the racket, he would droop visibly and order another beer.

It was beginning to be late and he was beginning to be desperate. They close at midnight and the waiters and the bartenders were passing the word to the customers to order up before the deadline. The oldtimer got down, looked around swimmingly and set a course for a table for six.

"Excuse me," he began, "for butting in but I am a little tight and probably I am a pest but I was at Chateu-Thierry and I can pull up my pants and show you shrapnel in both legs but this here is Easter Sunday and practically all night I have been sitting around here trying to play a particular record on that damn thing over there and the record I want to play is 'Easter Parade' because I am 43 years old and not young like these kids and I am sentimental about Easter and I love 'Easter Parade.' It is my favorite song and I wonder if you would be so kind to see if you can shove in there quick the next time it stops and get 'Easter Parade' for me."

A young flying cadet whose father is a retired four-striper of the navy, had noticed the old soldier's ribbon and in a tone of sympathy and respect said he would be glad to horn in and get "Easter Parade" for him the next time around if he had to knock somebody down. So with precise timing he was right there as the thing died, dropped his money, punched the right button and said "There you are, old soldier. Help yourself."

The old soldier hauled himself up, muttering thanks and crossed the room and almost climbed into the juke box. He grabbed hold of both sides, lowered his head and closed his eyes for the fulfillment after hours of frustration during which he had had to listen to the strident horrors of hot trumpets and the melancholy mooing of love-lorn tenors.

Now the record ceased to hiss and Irving Berlin's lovely music came sweet and true: "In your Easter bonnet, with all the frills upon it." A smile of serenity spread over the tanned face of the old soldier and he clasped his hands behind him and began to sway softly.

As it ended, he drooped onto a bench at a table littered with dead drinks and dead cigarets and put his face in his hands. When he looked up his eyes were red.

"Thank you, soldier," he said. "That was beautiful. All night I wanted 'Easter Parade' for Easter. I am so goddam lonesome!"

CANNED FOODS POINTS CHANGE DUE TOMORROW

OPA Plans Sunday Announcement for New Values Effective First of Next Week.

WASHINGTON — OPA today prepared to issue new May point tables for canned foods after completing new meat point tables including those covering kosher products.

Revised point values on processed foods will be issued today for release Sunday and will become effective Monday together with the new meat values.

The 41 divisions in point values covering next month's purchases of meats, fish, fats and cheese, were supplemented with additional changes in 15 kosher meat items. Most of the alterations in both programs consisted of point reductions. Some 25 items on the regular meat program were cut back one-point, while 13 kosher meats were similarly reduced.

Only two point increases were made in the kosher program, while 16 advances of one point were announced in ordinary meats. These increases primarily affected the less bony cuts of steak, roasts and chops.

A revised table of trade point values for meat, fats, fish and cheese was also issued, effective Monday, containing changes in point values which for the most part simply reflect those made in the new revised consumer point value table.

Nine fabricated veal cuts in a form customarily sold to restaurants by hotel supply houses, are added to the trade table. These, together with their trade point values are: leg-boned, rolled, and tied 8.6; leg - oven - prepared, 7.9; loin flank off, kidney and suet out, 9.0; loin steak-flank off, kidney suet out, 9.0; rack-chine and blade bone removed 7.8; stew meat 6.0; neck bones 1.0; shoulder neck off 6.0; shoulder-boned, rolled and tied 8.0.

In the cheese section of the trade table, process cheese, cheese foods and dehydrated - grated cheese are added, each at eight points a lb. Other small changes are made.

HOUSE SCOLDS ABSENTEES IN OHIO ASSEMBLY

40 Representatives Absent As Legislature Acts On Emergency Measures.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—The house of representatives which applauded Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker's attack against wartime work stoppages and "destroyers of time" today censured absenteeism of its own members.

Absence of more than 40 representatives yesterday came within one vote of blocking action on two emergency measures during the first Friday working session of the present assembly. House leaders scurried about rounding up members as rollcalls were repeated several times on the emergency bills before the required two-thirds majority of 91 votes could be registered.

Even then Speaker William M. McCulloch had to answer one roll —his first vote of the session —to save a bill ratifying Ohio participation in an interstate compact to conserve oil and gasoline and a single opposition vote would have defeated the senate-approved measure.

"This repeated walking out of our members must be disgusting not only to the house but to the people of the state," Rep. Cloyd V. Acton, R., Preble, said at the close of the session. "Whether our last session of the week is Thursday or Friday, 30 to 40 members have been walking out the night before. We should serve notice against them."

McCulloch sought to soften criticism by stating that "there probably have been more absences this week because of sickness than at any time in a decade." Several members were ill with influenza and two Lucas county representatives died within 24 hours during the week.

Objections were recorded to motions of Republican and Democratic leaders that 32 members be excused from the day's session. Excuses were granted by vote of the house, but a division was necessary to determine the verdict regarding Republican absentees.

Democratic Rep. H. H. Hannah, Brown, suggested that a statute penalizing absent members should be invoked. A provision of the general code, occasionally threatened but never invoked, would deprive members absent without excuse of their pay, rated at twenty dollars per day plus cost of expenses involved in attempts to get their attendance.

SENTENCED ON NEGLECT CHARGE

Mrs. Edith Elliott, 44, of 310 Marshall avenue, was given at least "24 hours in jail" in juvenile court Thursday by Judge Stuart Cramer who criticized her attitude in refusing to comply with orders of court and school officials.

Nine days of a 10-day sentence imposed for contributing to the neglect of her children will be suspended if she promises cooperation after serving the 24 hours, Judge Cramer said. Her husband, Charles Elliott, similarly charged, had a 10-day sentence suspended when both of them pleaded guilty to the charge. Mrs. Elliott had been in court on a similar charge a few months ago when a 10-day term was suspended.

Another couple living near Windsor, charged with contributing to the neglect of their children, was lectured but not sentenced.

TAKE A CHANCE, CAPTURE FIVE

Cleveland Detectives Draw Guns, Round Up Missouri Prison Fugitives.

CLEVELAND —(INS)— Two Cleveland detectives who took a chance were credited today with the capture of five fugitives from the Missouri state prison, Jefferson City, Mo., at a Cleveland street intersection last night.

The officers, Jerome Slusser and Frank Denzene, had been searching the southeastern section of the city for a stolen car bearing Missouri license plates when they spotted it parked and with its lights off. They drove their squad car headon at it, jumped from their car with drawn guns and dashed for the stolen vehicle.

"Don't shoot! We won't run," cried a voice. And at the same time, the five fugitives began tumbling from the car. None was armed, nor were any arms found in the auto.

The men who submitted without a struggle, were Owen Taylor, 21; Winford Maeyers, 37; Robert Krueger, 18; Bennet Hessink, 17; and Mason Skenes, 19. Krueger and Hessink once lived in Cleveland.

TWO MOTORISTS GET CITATIONS

Two motorists, cited yesterday by police on speeding charges, were ordered to appear later for hearings in municipal court while the case of a third was continued this morning in court.

Edward Voelker, of Buffalo, N. Y., cited on Lexington avenue, posted $25 bond for his appearance in court May 14. Miss Dorothy McDevitt, 73 Western avenue, was ordered to appear May 5 for a hearing.

Hearing of a charge of failing to observe a stop sign against Woodrow E. Zinn was continued today until next Tuesday. Zinn was arrested by state highway patrolmen.

2 AXIS BOATS SUNK

LONDON —(AP)— Two German salvage boats and a pontoon were sunk by magnetic mines yesterday in the Oersund, the narrow strait between Denmark and Sweden, Reuters reported today from Stockholm. The report added 39, men, mostly French and Belgians, lost their lives.

Pupils at Bushnell school are keeping pace with the grown-ups in doing their part to avenge the killing of American fliers by the Japanese. According to Principal Roy Spetka, the pupils exceeded their war stamp sales quotas in both March and April. The quota for March was $100. Pupils purchased $118 worth of stamps. The quota was raised to $125 for April, and the pupils purchased $140 worth of stamps. The fourth grade class, under supervision of Miss Dorothy Curtis, was in charge of the drive.

Mansfielders have been invited to see the new John Todd park in its spring dress Sunday afternoon when guides will be on hand at the park to show visitors around. Guides will be posted at the end of Home and Lincoln avenues at 2 p. m. to greet visitors. The park, recently added to the city's system, is back of the children's home. It is being developed rapidly as one of the beauty spots of the Mansfield area. A membership rally will be held next Tuesday night at the Hedges school, George Keil, membership chairman, said. Plans for further development of the area will be discussed then.

Though messages are difficult to send and hard to get through war-crossed communication lines, Mansfielders find it still possible to communicate with relatives in the old country. This week two such messages came into the Red Cross Home Service department. Joe Scafede, Olivesburg road, received word from relatives in Rome. The message which was sent last November came yesterday after traveling through Switzerland to get to the United States. An answer to the message which she sent February, 1942, to her mother in Munich was received last week by Mrs. Guido Spognardi.

CALL DOUGHTON BILL STEPCHILD

Republicans Attack Measure As Loan Shark Heaven With Double Payments.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — Nine Republican members of the house ways and means committee today assailed the administration's new pay-as-you-go tax plan as "a stepchild of political pressure," "a tax lawyer's dream" and "a loan shark's 'seventh heaven'."

"The latter, especially, will do a rush business when the hard-pressed taxpayers discover the Democratic majority's bill . . . has actually raised their taxes by nearly $5,500,000,000," they said in a minority report.

The minority supported the Carlson-Ruml skip-a-year plan and charged that the 50 per cent forgiveness bill recommended by the Democratic majority would provide "wholly unnecessary and unjustifiable" doubling-up of income tax payments.

A majority report filed by Democratic members of the committee contended there is sound reason for granting 50 per cent tax relief, but called the total forgiveness features of the Carlson-Ruml plan "most unfair."

"Due to the high rates, it will be impossible to recapture the forgiven tax from the taxpayers in the higher bracket," the Democrats contended in their analysis of the Republican bill.

They conceded that the majority bill will cause "some doubling up" in tax payments over a three-year period but said it was justified because of the great need for increased revenue.

IN HOLLYWOOD-- By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD - Short takes from around the lots:

Production has started on "America," King Vidor's story of American industrial power. Which is interesting because the feminine lead will be Ann Richards, a young Australian. . . . Republic plans to spend more than a million on "Gay Blades," first starring vehicle for Vera Hruba, Czechoslovakian figure-skating champion. Miss Hruba is the girl who received 100,000 marriage proposals because, when she first came to this country, she was in danger of deportation.

Lloyd C. Douglas' best-seller "The Robe" will be filmed in technicolor by RKO Radio, after six months of preparatory work. . . . United Artists is ready to produce a screen version of the radio serial, "One Man's Family," now that Carlton Morse who directs and writes the serial, has finished the first draft. . . . Martha Scott, who did a play on Broadway earlier this season will be in the cast of "Hi Diddle Diddle," a U. A. epic about burlesque. Also cast are Constance Bennett, Adolphe Menjou, Pola Negri, Dennis O'Keefe, Billie Burke and Walter Kingsford.

Columbia has signed Jerome Kern and Ira Gershwin to write music and lyrics for a technicolor musical, "Cover Girl," which will star Rita Hayworth and go right by Jinx Falkenburg . . . Jacques Tourneur will direct "This Is Russia" for RKO. . . . Elaine Shepard, New York queen of models, debuts in "The Falcon In Danger," also RKO.

Samuel Goldwyn has in mind a return to the days of the Goldwyn Girls as he looks for "the 16 most beautiful girls in the world" for his new musical, "Up In Arms." Among those who got screen breaks as Goldwyn Girls were Paulette Goddard, Virginia Bruce, Betty Grable and Lucille Ball. . . . Columbia is working on a film to be titled "Officers' Candidate School," which certainly shouldn't mislead anybody. . . . "Destroyer," went back into production for some up-to-the-minute stuff on the U-boat situation.

From this distance, the corn seems to be very green in Brooklyn, where part of the Red Skelton baseball picture, "Whistling In Brooklyn," is being filmed. We are assured, however, that there will not be the usual annoying violations of baseball etiquette, such as four outs to an inning. . . . A former drama professor at Boston university, William R. Anderson, has been signed by Columbia as dialogue director. . . . Anna Neagle and Ray Milland, who first appeared together in "Irene," will be teamed again in one of the early scenes of "Forever and a Day."

Ann Miller, Rochester and Freddy Martin's orchestra are in a new musical, "What's Buzzin', Cousin?" . . . Olivia de Havilland has the romantic title role in "Government Girl," the Adela Rogers St. Johns serial purchased by RKO. . . . Samuel Goldwyn has signed Walter Brennan's 19-year-old daughter, Ruth, for a screen debut in "North Star." . . . The screen version of "Cry Havoc," which Broadway didn't like as a play largely because of its unpleasant ending, has Ann Sothern, Merle Oberon and Fay Bainter in the cast.

--AND A BIT OF CHATTER

›kyo Task Force' Makes Its Home Port

DITOR'S NOTE: The voyage home of the task force accompanied the aircraft carrier Hornet on its bomb-ission against Tokyo is discussed in the concluding in-ent of "Shangri-La Diary" by Richard Tregaskis.)

(INS Staff Correspondent)

SEA WITH SHANGRI-LA TASK FORCE—Today time for relaxing after our great effort, even though 're not yet by any means out of hostile waters. After ast, a group of officers took their ease in the ward-arning about decorations and citations, brave actions of navy Nicaragua and China.

e had been no alarms during the night. Now a heavy swell shed us homeward, the remained overcast and and it seemed we were ifely started on our last obvious that many of the wanted to do that. "Wild ›sey's going to hit 'em ›ore he hauls out of here."

›ere was no confirmation ›hen I talked to some of the higher officers. "I don't know anything official about it," said one authority, indulging in the usual military-naval prefix, "but I'd be willing to bet we're going straight home."

Later in the day the matter was settled when our course reverted to its former direction. And thus some more scuttlebutt was laid to rest—as it usually is.

There were no alarums or excursions or traces of the enemy today, although the lookouts jumped a mile when they saw what appeared to be a two-man sub directly in our course. It was the carcass of a dead whale. We passed quite close by the mouldy old beast; and, I must say, his resemblance to a submarine was amazing.

At a table below decks, a group of officers sat down at a table heaped with envelopes. They were censoring the mail which will leave the ship when she returns to port.

One of the officers told me that the most touching thing about the letters was the number of times the writers mentioned love with obvious sincerity. It was love for wives, sweethearts, and always for parents and families. Apparently, the old adage about a soft heart under a hard shell applies to our fighting men at sea.

Later on in the day, one of our top officers talked freely about the nerve strain of the modern war at sea. "The reason we seem to take it so calmly," he said, "is that you can either take it or you can't. Some people are just not fitted temperamentally to take it. And trying to resist the strain only makes it worse for them."

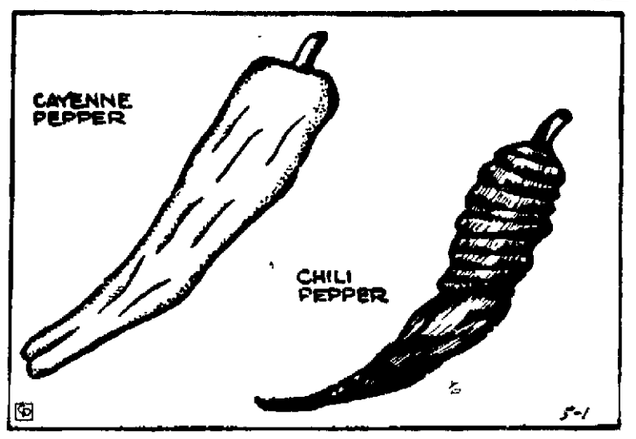
This officer said that his only trouble under war conditions had been the development of insomnia. "The funny thing is," he continued, "that you can't judge how a person is going to react under the strain of hard watches and a lot of emergencies.

"We had a man who I thought would be splendid. He was the careful, thoughtful, methodical type. But he went to pieces and had to be hospitalized after only two months out. I guess he tried too hard and thought too much."

Homecoming for us today. Back into port. Sea calming; it was good to be able to walk the deck without unintentionally zig-zagging; good to eat breakfast without chasing plates about the table.

But our return was as unexpected as our departure had been. There was nothing of public rejoycing about it. For the time being, we were all ordered to observe absolute secrecy about our mission. They did not even fly the victory flag from the mast, as the ship slid in to her anchorage.

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH



Hot Peppers In the Victory Garden.

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Association.

ALTHOUGH hot peppers are not an all-important vegetable in the event of a drastic food shortage, the average Victory gardener only needs to grow a few plants to supply his or her household needs. The pepper plants do not require much room in the Victory garden and the fruits are desirable for flavoring sauces, for pickling purposes and for relishes.

There are several varieties of hot peppers, but as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph, the two most frequently grown and used are the Long Red Cayenne and the Small Chili.

The Long Red Cayenne has scarlet, pungent pods which are desirable for pickling, canning and drying. The pods can also be used green as well as in their ripe state.

The Red Chili peppers are small and extra hot and pungent and are especially desirable for making pepper sauce.

Hungarian Wax is another good hot variety of pepper. It is an early variety and very productive. The fruit pods of this variety are a waxy, pale-yellow color at first which turns to orange and later when the pod is fully matured to a bright red.

When handling the hot pepper pods, if the fingers become burned, applications of milk will be found soothing. Soap and water does not give relief. Some cooks wear gloves to protect their hands.

Ethyl Battin Presents Pupils Of Dance Studio In 'Potpourri'

American Legion To Sponsor Show at Madison Tuesday

Ethyl Battin's current show, "Potpourri," will play at the Madison theater, Tuesday, May 4, curtain at 8:15 p m

Life is transfused to the maiden-goddess only through this melody. The spell is broken by its opening strains and Miss Battin emerges as a vibrant dancing girl, returning to her statuesque inertia at the selection's close.

Effecting a complete right about face, Miss Battin goes all out for comedy in a "surprise" number at the close of the first act.

As the curtain rises on act one, a bespectacled Jim Brownscombe presides over a schoolroom where youngsters in pinafores hold slates which cleverly spell out the name of the production, "Potpourri."

Classes in geographic-tapology present Battin students in dances typical of countries in every corner of the world. A lesson on Africa is recited by way of a slum sham tap routine by five-year-old Robert Smith, talented son of Louis Bromfield's chauffeur.

Another five-year-old, Sally Lou Zeger, costumed as a raga-muffin tomboy, steals a scene when she taps on stage holding a mouse.

Jim Brownscombe does an extra bit toward the success of the show with his clever burlesque on "An Apple for the Teacher."

Still another highlight is a mother-daughter act in which the former is lovely as Bo-Peep in a dress with boufant skirt of black net with pink and silver accents. Her daughter, costumed in white fur cloth, is the "lamb."

The second act opens on a moonlight garden scene as the audience becomes the schoolroom and Professor Brownscombe takes his "students" to "balletomania."

Sponsored by the Earl D. McVey Post of the American Legion, the show presents students of the Battin Dance Studio in a review starring Miss Battin and featuring genial Jim Brownscombe as schoolmaster-master of ceremonies.

Tickets for the show are on sale at Fox Jewelry, Tawse Drug store and the Battin Dance Studio.

In addition to directing all dance routines and appearing in two special numbers in the show, Miss Battin, in collaboration with Rose Lyne of Cleveland, also wrote the unique script of "Potpourri" in which all characters are introduced cleverly in rhyme.

Miss Battin has gone even further toward proving her versatile artistry by designing all costumes for the presentation. Virginia Bayer has been engaged for the past several weeks in working from Miss Battin's sketches to produce a truly beautiful wardrobe for the show.

The most spectacular number of "Potpourri" is a ballet-toe dance, "The Enchanted Harp," in which Miss Battin appears dramatically in gold lame, her dark hair covered with a head dress of gold leaves and flowers, her skin completely gilded in gold paint. At the beginning Miss Battin, like a statue of a goddess on a Viking ship, is draped on the front of a gold harp. A moonlight blue spotlight is played effectively on the scene as Mrs. Joy Herbert, harpist, plays Debussy's Clair de Lune.

As this ballet sequence opens six students of the Dance Studio demonstrate ballet technique using a picket fence for a ballet barre. Miss Battin is using a Victor Herbert medley for this simulation of a class in ballet.

Interesting performer in this act is a ten year old ballerina, who, being totally deaf, does remarkable work under Miss Battin's direction by counting. Complementing her number are six tiny ballet dancers.

Other colorful performances include a sprightly Strauss waltz number, a bubble-ballet dance and a very lovely portrayal of "Ballet-Peem," danced artfully with hoops by a ballet corps of 12 girls dressed in white and silver, the soloist outstanding in a blue ballerina costume.

In a spectacular finale, a patriotic tableau, Mrs. Charles Anglin, dressed as Columbia, will lead the audience and students in singing the Star Spangled Banner, accompanied by the American Legion drum corps and ten majorettes.

"Potpourri" culminates a season's study of the dance by students of the Ethyl Battin Dance Studio located at 22½ South Main. Members of all classes appear in the show.

SHE'S ENVIED

SAN DIEGO, Cal. —(U.P.)— Mrs. Gene Pirazzini of Valley Center is believed to be the first woman in the world to have attained what at one time or another has been the ambition or burning desire of every city-bred boy and man. Not only has she qualified as a fire truck driver but she already has had her baptism of fire.

Now, at the first stroke of the alarm, she has the right to jump into the driver's seat, turn on the siren, set the gong to sounding and then, stepping on the accelerator, go careening at breakneck speed down the traffic-cleared streets, while men and boys aligned on both sides ogle her with envy and jealousy.

GHOST OF MY LOVE +

CHAPTER XXVII

[—I—please! Please, let

s your husband! Boyle!"

. . Oh!"

"I couldn't find him in town. I'm glad he came."

"Bill, you must listen to me!"

Boyle was leaving his car two blocks down the street, where the army trucks were parked in front of Uncle Pete's Lightning City hotel. They saw him surveying the situation. When he discovered Bill and Rosemary he lifted his hand in greeting and started toward them.

"Bill, I don't want you to meet him face to face!"

"But why not?" Bill was rather eager now. "Rosemary, I tell you we've got him licked! We don't need his lumber. I was stupid not to see what was right under my nose in the first place. This town is abandoned property on government land. We can use it with no red tape and without paying any war profiteer."

"That's what I'm afraid of! Harry is—dangerous!"

"Nayah-h-h!" Bill scoffed.

"You don't know him!"

"Neither do you, Rosemary. You married him, you said, but you didn't live with him. What can you know about the man?"

"I'm afraid of him. For you!"

"Don't be silly!"

"Hello-o-o-!" Boyle himself called that now. He had come within hailing distance, and he approached them with his characteristic cocky, smirking smile.

Rosemary felt a tightening inside her. It was antipathy for Boyle, in part. And it was fear of what might happen between the two men. Harry Boyle had been defeated. But he wasn't the kind to take a defeat in good grace. Even if she hadn't been with him much, she knew enough to fear the cruelty of him, and sense the devil in his eyes.

"I'm not being silly," she answered Bill. "I am afraid. Please go. Please let me talk to him! Bill, I—I've never asked anything of you, have I? Never before? You must do what I ask now! Please, Bill!"

Her intensity astonished him, so that he looked at her and slowly replied, "OK, if you feel it this way."

She almost ran down the hill to meet Boyle; and rather than appear just to stare at them, Bill turned to join the young Britishers who were working up and down the streets. It occurred to him that Rosemary would want him out of sight, so he went into a building.

"What they say or do is no business of mine, anyway," he told himself. "If he wants to call on his wife, and she wants to see him alone, who am I to force myself in?"

Technically, that was logical all the way. Sensible. Sane. But Mr. Bill St. Clair still could get no comfort from it. Interfere between man and wife? Never! He definitely was not the interfering kind. But then—

Glumly, angrily, he forced himself to join the soldiers who were moving heavy counters in a mercantile store to make room for army cots that would be coming. But he couldn't concentrate on this work. His mind kept whirling back to incidents of the past few weeks. Little moments with Rosemary. Little things she had intimated or said. Intermittently too, he berated himself for being a fool.

"There must be at least 10 million girls in America I could have fallen in love with," he almost growled aloud, "and had some hopes of—of—" He banished the thought. It wouldn't do to dwell on Rosemary Lee or Rosemary Boyle. It wouldn't do to confess, even to himself, that he had fallen in love with her, that he had bottled up that love desperately. To confess it, he realized, would simply intensify the strain. Perhaps cause it to break out in embarrassing manner. "She's nothing to me," he argued bitterly now. "Nothing but a cute kid. A darned clever architect in our office. That's all. Her business is strictly her own. She means nothing to me." But a man can lie to himself, and Bill St. Clair knew it.

Involuntarily he glanced out a window, looking down Cody street. He saw Rosemary and Boyle walking off together in the Purple Canyon haze. To force down the rancor and misery that welled within him then, Bill St. Clair pitched in to work.

Two hours later dinner had been served to the 160-odd people who now were the population of Lightning. The British trainees were a tired but altogether satisfied group of lads, adequately provided for in every way possible until the morrow. Bill left them at 8:20. He would go to his room in the hotel, he told himself, and sleep, minding his own business. Tomorrow and for a month there'd be tremendous work to do. He wouldn't think of Rosemary Lee Boyle or any other woman.

That resolution lasted about 15 seconds. For one thing, every detail here shouted of her. And next moment he saw her coming in. She was walking slowly up Cody street alone. Harry Boyle's car was gone.

Bill hastened down the hill. "When did he leave?" was his greeting.

"An hour ago, maybe," she said, flatly.

"Did he, uh—I see. Well—well, you better come in, hadn't you Rosemary? Were you just walking out here alone?"

He took her arm and she winced. "Oh!" It was a sharp little outcry of pain, involuntary.

She tried to cover up. Tried to hide the revelation. But Bill St. Clair was already on edge. Silently, gently, but forcefully, he led her into the hotel light. There he peered straight into her face.

A look of fury slowly spread over him. "Rosemary!" he breathed.

"I'm all right! Please, Bill I—I am. I must go to my room now!"

But there was a painful arm. And droplets of blood dried in her collar. An ugly looking bruise showed on her cheek where her dimple had shown.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, MAY 1, 1943.

Drive carefully tomorrow—and don't depend on getting new tires very soon.

Wonder how the state legislature ever overlooked that statement about "government of the people, by the people and for the people."

The first electric light has just reached an upper New England hamlet—and the natives are up in arms over how underprivileged they had been without knowing it.

War-Time Miners' Strike Is Anarchy

WHATEVER other interpretation may be made by John L. Lewis and the more than half million coal miners he controls, that minority group has acted in a way that, if permitted to continue, will mean defeat for the United States in the war now being waged.

The striking miners say, in effect, "We will not co-operate with the national war effort unless our demands for higher wages are granted and we will not abide by decision of the War Labor Board."

The war cannot be fought without the vast amounts of coal necessary to production of military equipment, and, if John L. Lewis and his followers have their way THE WAR CAN STOP RIGHT NOW—which would mean victory for the Axis powers—Germany, Italy and Japan.

More than 500,000 miners are idle today. Insofar as their own attitude is concerned they will remain idle indefinitely, pending acquiescence in their arbitrary demands.

John L. Lewis and the miners to whom he dictates see only one small segment of the national and world picture—the little part that involves their own selfish interests. Surely they do not realize what their present rebellious action may mean to the future of their country and the entire world.

Drastic action has been promised by President Roosevelt, as commander-in-chief of the army and navy, to shorten the critical period of work cessation in the struck mines—but the problem remains: "What quickly effective action can be taken, and can it be taken speedily enough to avert disastrous consequences?"

Have Congressmen Also Learned?

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S contact with the country, during his recent 7,652-mile trip through twenty states, leads him to conclude that "the country as a whole has a better perspective on the war . . . is soberer in temper and more intelligent in attitude than a good part of Washington."

Just how far away from Washington congressmen have been during their recess this week is not known, but it may be hoped that the distance has been sufficiently great and their contacts such as to give them an idea of what the people back home think of the income tax fumbling that has been going on in Washington.

The whole income tax program has been subjected to so much political juggling that public confusion is now almost equal to that existing in congress, but the fact still looms large that the basic principle of the Ruml plan is the only practicable method that has been proposed thus far.

Under this plan income taxes paid this year would be based on the current year's income, rather than on last year's, and any seeming advantage gained in isolated cases could be prevented under provisions of the law itself, as, for instance, by making the profits from partnerships subject to the same tax rates imposed on corporations, which would be unaffected by the proposed change.

As a temporary expedient, the idea of withholding 20 per cent of earnings to apply on current taxes seems unavoidable, but the proposal to require payment of taxes on last year's income, plus a deduction of 20 per cent from wages and salaries, would present a financial problem which relatively few workers would be able to solve—while they are also meeting living costs and buying war bonds.

Congressmen will reconvene Monday to resume consideration of the income tax question. Possibly they have learned something during their recess period—if so they will find solution of the tax problem easier than it has seemed.

Columbian Exposition Anniversary

FIFTY YEARS AGO TODAY gates opened for the Columbian Exposition in Chicago—which still stands as the greatest "world fair" ever held in the United States.

This exposition commemorated the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America and the attendance, from all over the world, during its 179 days, totaled 27,529,400.

It was at the Columbian Exposition that many visitors were given the first hint of coming marvels in the field of electricity, although automobiles, the radio, motion pictures, and the like, were then little more than fantastic dreams.

More recent world fairs have carried the picture of material progress to the year of their showing but none has made as great an impress on the minds of those who attended as did the great show that occupied 179 acres on the shore of Lake Michigan fifty years ago.

All Should Know the Reasons

SOLDIERS in the training camp and at the front don't talk much about the war. But they do a lot of thinking, and occasionally some of it leaks out. From one camp comes the news that men there want to know "what the war's about."

It's the same old query that used to be in one of the school readers, in a poem called "The Battle of Blenheim." The children asked their grandfather to "tell them all about the war, and what they fought each other for." And that stumped Grandpa. He only knew that "it was a famous victory."

Now if there really are Americans, in the training camps and at the fronts, who don't know what this war is about, they certainly should be told. And even though most of them probably have a fairly good idea of what's going on, wouldn't it be profitable to tell every service man clearly, in the course of his training or afterward, just exactly why he is called to fight for his country in a foreign land?

Oliver Cromwell's powerful army of free men knew what they were fighting for. That's why they fought so well. And you can bet that Stalin's soldiers know what they're about. These are days when every American should know likewise, and be able to tell the world about it.

Kuban Sector Vital To Nazi Aims

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

WE MAY be getting close to the denouement of the Caucasian drama—Fuehrer Hitler's protracted and bloody effort to crack this gateway to the Russian oil on which he hoped to float to glory.

For days the Nazis and the Reds have been sparring for position in the Kuban sector (maps please) where the boche hold a bridgehead on the Caucasian shore opposite the Crimea, as well as the important naval port of Novorossisk. Hitler apparently has been hoping this might be his open sesame to the Caucasus if he could get an offensive under way. The Bolshevists have been bent not only on spiking his drive but on kicking him out of his bridgehead altogether.

The all highest's scheme—as your map will make clear—has been to use the Crimea as a spring-board from which he could fling an army across the narrow Kerch strait to his bridgehead. Then by coordinating this with an assault on the Reds in the Rostov sector a little to the north he might force the Russian line back and get somewhere. Even if he didn't push his way down the Caucasus, he still might ensure his hold on his bridgehead and Novorossisk, thereby continuing to deprive the Muscovites of freedom of the important northern part of the Black sea.

The plan is daring, but has merits making it possible for Herr Hitler to say with the stage conjurer: "It's a good trick if I do it— and it's a good trick if I don't."

So the opposing forces have been stabbing and feinting at each other, and observers have noted that the advantage might lie with the side which could begin an offensive first. Now Berlin announces the Russians have launched their expected "large scale attack" against the bridgehead.

This may mean the Reds have beaten the Nazis to the punch. We shall see in due course. In any event, there are the makings of a fierce battle, for the zone involved is of vast strategic value in connection with control of the Black sea.

THE SPRING mud is fast drying out on the Kuban delta, with the arrival of sunshine and warmer weather. The ground in the Crimea also has become firm enough to provide the Luftwaffe with bases from which to strike at the Russians on the mainland. Hundreds of bomber and fighter planes have been moved to the Crimea for use in the Caucasus.

The Hitlerites have reinforced their armies in the Kuban, and it's interesting to note that they are using a considerable number of Rumanian troops.

Apparently Hitler is forced to conserve his own first line men, for he is taking a chance in using the Rumanians who have been thoroughly fed up with the bloody part assigned to them over a long period.

However, it's the German idea to use other nationalities where possible for cannon fodder, as witness the manner in which the Italians have been sacrificed in Tunisia.

While the Nazis have put reinforcements onto the mainland, they are reported to be having an unhappy time protecting their supply lines across the Kerch strait. The Reds have flung additional air strength into the conflict and this has been raising hob with the German communications.

At this writing, the Kuban battle-field is the vital sector of the Russian front.

Listen World!

Emotional Nudists

THESE are hard times for people who haven't any clothes. I'm not meaning suits or dresses, boots, coats or shoes.... things that cover the body. I'm thinking of things that cover the feelings—the emotional armor that makes you able to take life as it comes.

We're all born naked, physically and emotionally. We start life in the raw. That doesn't matter very much, at first. We live within a small, uncomplicated world. And we're protected. It doesn't matter, greatly, what we think or say or do. Our mind's like a small savage who rarely sees beyond his jungle cave.

But presently the world grows larger, more complicated and difficult to understand. You start having "feelings." Hurt feelings. Frightened feelings. Bewildered, angry feelings. And no one any longer tries to "kiss the bump away." They tell you "you're a big girl now and mustn't cry." They scold or laugh at you because you're "sensitive."

You feel that everyone is "picking" at you . . . and you can't pick back. For, though you've clothes to cover your body now, you still lack clothes to cover your emotions. And each experience is taken personally: each shock or disappointment rubs upon your naked flesh as a rough rug would rub against the soft flesh of a little child.

THEN gradually you begin to see that you are causing much of this distress yourself. It isn't life that's hurting you . . . it's your peculiar way of taking life that's wrong. You aren't the only person on this earth. You aren't the only one who's lonely or in pain. The Other Person's problems are as hard on him as yours. And if you think of his, your own hurt seems to shrink.

Slowly you come to this new realization. And with each widened view you find vast new horizons. Your private life's no longer so personal or important. Each thing you have to do becomes a part of all the world's performance in which a million others share their burden equally with you.

You are no longer raw. You are acquiring a cover for your naked egotism. You're growing up.

OR ARE YOU?

There's the most important question in your life. To grow up equally in body, mind and soul. Or to grow in spots. Or stay a baby all your adult life.

That's the way you were intended to grow, the easy, happy way—all over. But all of us don't make it. Many of us are still taking life as childishly at 60 as we did at 16. Some never learn that wise and friendly people should be grown up . . . they do not want to learn. They pride themselves on "being sensitive." And so they make life wretched for themselves and all who know them.

COVER UP! STOP BEING AN EMOTIONAL NUDIST!

YOU WOULDN'T WALK DOWN MAIN STREET WITH YOUR SHIRT TAIL HANGING OUT—THEN WHY ATTEMPT IT WITH YOUR SPIRIT?

NAKED EMOTIONS ARE AS UNCIVILIZED AS NAKED FLESH AS STUPID AND AS VULGAR.

May 1 is the anniversary of a few "firsts." It was on this date in 1873 that the U. S. government first issued one-cent postcards. And it was on this date in 1879, that the first elevated train in this country made its inaugural trip. It ran from New York City's Trinity street to 59th street.

Words of the Wise

Everything is dangerous to him that is afraid of it. - Benjamin Whichcote.

Small opportunities are often the beginning of great enterprises. - Demosthenes.

Dave Boone Says:

JUST run over these war communiques and reach your own conclusions: Headquarters in North Africa: In the face of severe shelling and slow progress through the worst land-mine field yet encountered, American troops gained two important hills, suffering heavy losses.

Headquarters in Australia: Japanese air forces staged surprise attacks in the Solomons area today. Greatly outnumbered, our airmen repulsed them. Three of our aircraft are missing.

Headquarters in North Pacific: Flying through the worst fogs so far encountered, formations of our planes made eleven attacks on Kiska today against increasing anti-aircraft fire.

United States of America, headquarters of John L. Lewis: Mr. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, blasted the government's duly constituted war labor board, defied the commander-in-chief's wishes and imperiously ignored the crippling of major war industries through a coal mine strike. Mr. Lewis observed the usual hours and comforts. None of his gestures was missing.

Timely Editorial

Paranoiac Behavior.

German approval of the lawless execution of American fliers in Japan is in harmony with what a neurologist, writing in the Atlantic Monthly, has called the paranoid behavior of the German nation. In backing Japan, German spokesmen refer to "American wickedness" in Tunisia.

American correspondents who were in Germany before the United States was in the war reported German indignation over the wickedness of the Royal Air Force in bombing German cities after German planes had killed thousands of civilians in the bombing of British cities.

The paranoiac believes everything he does, including any violence he uses, is right, and any attempt to restrain him is wrong. Identical symptoms appear in the attitude of the German people toward the nations upon which they forced this hideous war.—Kansas City Times.

Summary of Week's Happenings

Controversy Over Rubber Supply Confuses Public as To Prospects

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

THE RUBBER SHORTAGE that developed in the U. S. after Pearl Harbor might have been overcome in a comparatively short time through a massive synthetic rubber-making program except for one vital factor—war's demands for essential metals did not permit their unlimited use in setting up the plants for synthetics.

Even so, Rubber Administrator William M. Jeffers was optimistic over the rubber outlook a few weeks ago. He thought he might resign by mid-summer, if the synthetics program continued to go along so well. But that was before his latest brush with the war department.

Last week Jeffers was "the maddest Irishman in all the United States," as the war department contended that his rubber-making program was hampering the production of 100 octane gasoline, the stuff that propels airplanes on all the fighting fronts. The shortage is so great, said the department, that army planes have been grounded, combat training curtailed.

A point at issue was the shortage of valves, control instruments and heat exchangers—all of them equally necessary to the plants making synthetic rubber and to the refineries turning out aviation gasoline.

Into the muddle went WPB Chairman Donald Nelson, presumably sympathetic to Jeffers, and Petroleum Cordinator Ickes, on the side of the army's spokesman, Undersecretary Robert Patterson. And finally, into the fracas went the senate war investigating committee.

Washingtonians who have watched Jeffers and Nelson win their points on other occasions, believed that this might be the biggest test of authorities and priorities, with the loser's resignation winding up on FDR's desk.

At Home

Taxation Ideas.

The tax block-buster that the house ways and means committee compounded a few weeks ago turned into a dud when it hit the house floor; the Democrats knocked out the Republican proposal and the Republicans smothered the Democratic proposal.

Then, as economic experts started worrying overtime about the threat of surplus spending money and the accompanying threat of inflation, the committee went back to work, came up with another plan that will get its test in the house during the coming week.

The new proposal, designed entirely by Democratic members of the committee, indicates a change of heart by some of those who earlier shouted "no abatement of 1942 taxes." It would provide:

(1) A 20 per cent withholding levy on wages and salaries, beginning July 1.

(2) Payment of 1942 tax obligations on the basis of lower rates, higher personal exemptions of 1941.

(3) Application of payments already made on 1942 taxes to the tax bill on income earned this year.

(4) That the payments of 1942 taxes may be spread over a three-year period, but granting discounts to those who pay by March 15, 1945.

Republicans, still aiming for the Ruml plan to skip 1942 taxes—or at least 75 per cent of them—withheld details of their strategy.

Sub Margin, a Million.

Whether the Allies are building ships faster than the Axis is sinking them has been a prime question for months. A few days ago the senate's Truman war investigating committee came up with the answer: The Allied loss of 12,000,000 tons in 1942 was greater than the combined American and British new construction.

Secretary of the Navy Knox bridled at the statement, told his press conference the next day the conclusion was an "obvious error" involving the difference between gross and deadweight tons.

Then Secretary Knox and Truman Committeeman Senator Webster sat down for a conference to clear up "a number of factors in the confusing situation. . . ." Then the navy issued another statement:

On the basis of partly complete figures on merchant ship construction, the Allies suffered a net loss of "something over a million tons." The implication was that there was some Allied construction not accounted for in the figures.

Thus was the Truman committee apparently vindicated. But the vindication emphasized, too, that although 1942 marked the beginning of Allied comebacks on land, it marked a sharp defeat in the war against the submarine.

Bounceless Balls.

Baseball fans had expected the pitchers to have an early-season advantage over the batters, but they didn't expect eight shut-outs to come up in the first dozen major league games.

In Cincinnati, the Reds' General Manager Warren C. Giles, a member of the committee drawing specifications for the wartime ball, climbed to the top of the grandstand and dropped the 1943 ball, then the 1942 model, to the concrete below. He discovered that compared to the old one, the new model was "dead" by some 3½ feet in bounce.

National league officials immediately moved for a change in specifications of the ball, notified clubs that they could use up left-over supplies of the old ball. Brooklyn and Philadelphia responded with a 23-hit exhibition, but on the same day, Chicago and Pittsburgh used the new ball, combined for 20 hits.

Major difference in the new ball is the extensive use of balata, the hard covering for golf balls, in the core. The American league, where the same ball is in play, had no complaints, planned no change.

Farmer's Diary

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

HE'LL STAY

I MET him north of our county. It was a cool drizzly afternoon and he wore a heavy topcoat as he sat on the seat of the manure spreader—but he wore it youthfully. Something about him interested me. I stopped and waited until he drove his frisky sorrel team along beside me.

"That's nighty good stuff," I remarked.

"Yes," he agreed. "I aim to keep it tramped well in the straw shed all winter, then spread it just before I plow. In fact, I disk it deep into the top soil and prefer a rain before I turn it over. Dad and I cut clover from this field last year."

He seemed to know so confidently what he was doing that I wondered where he might have had his training.

"I've been at state Ag school for the past two years," he confided. "Those new ideas do make a difference on our farm. Dad isn't always so hot about every new method. We have some lively discussions. But he's a mighty good sport. One reason I like to work at home is because he will let me go ahead.

"We have 200 acres and the modern way it's a cinch. I'm trying to see just how much more we can raise this year than we ever did before, without injuring the land. Dad's seventy but he can help a lot, and mother's only 61 and she helps, too, if we have to have some extra. We've given up plans of getting anyone from outside.

"All the men my age, except five married ones, have gone to war. And that's my trouble! I'm 24. I know farming better than anything else and my folks keep saying that, with our setup, and the need for food, I can be many times more valuable on the home front than in the army. But some people don't think so.

"Someone painted 'slacker' on our pasture bars. Every time I go into the village, little groups look at me and whisper as I pass. Sometimes cars pass our house at night and some smarty yells an unkind word and calls my name. I got a letter that asked how I would feel when my buddies came back home and I had stayed out and let them fight my battles for me. It had no name signed to it. . . .

"I'd rather go. Sometimes I vow I will. But then there's Dad and Mother and all that land it'd lie idle, and I know how to make it produce. I guess a fellow has to do his own job as he sees it. Get up, Dolly!"

I admired the set of his chin as he drove away.

LIFE'S LIKE THAT

"Listen, do I tell you how to take care of your doll?!"

Abroad

Friends Fall Out.

The strangeness of bedfellows that war makes proved too much this week for the strained relations between Poland and Russia. In a polite but razor-sharp note, Russia kicked Poland's government-in-exile out of its sector of the United Nations bed.

The Soviet action in breaking off diplomatic relations heartened Radio Berlin, caused the state department in Washington to express "regret," caused London to style the situation "not impossible." The good offices of the United States in the person of Ambassador Winant were enlisted hurriedly in London in conferences between Prime Minister Churchill and Polish Premier Waldyslaw Sikorski.

Caught off base by the suddenness of the break, Axis propaganda chiefs let a day slip by before they got into the groove. Then they offered a glib pleased interpretation of the dispute.

For Tokyo: Bonds.

If the treasury department had needed an incentive for the second war loan drive for 13 billion dollars it could have found no better one than the disclosure of Japan's execution of American aviators captured after the Doolittle bombing of Tokyo.

War bond sales were doing nicely when the civilized world learned of the executions, which Washington called a clear violation of international war conventions. Then quotas were virtually scrapped as all over the country outraged Americans laid down their dollars to lay down more bombs on Tokyo.

If Tokyo meant to frighten American airmen its calculations backfired, for U. S. troops everywhere vowed to avenge the killings, which Tokyo defended, Berlin tacitly approved.

Safe By a Hair.

In the life of Lesley James "Whitey" McNair, artillery has been important. He was commissioned a second lieutenant in this branch of the service upon graduation from West Point 39 years ago; he followed it throughout his army career; he won the Distinguished Service Medal in World war I for his skill in artillery operations of the AEF in France.

Last week, artillery put McNair, now a lieutenant general and commander of U. S. army ground forces, in a Tunisian hospital, and furnished him another medal—the Purple Heart.

Quotes

Donald M. Nelson, war production chief, blasts indulgence in personal rivalries: "This is no time for popularity contests. The only thing that matters is to whip the Axis."

Dr. William E. Gilroy, editor of Advance: "People today make the sins and faults of church people an excuse for not going to church. The church has a holiness beyond the virtues or faults of the people who worship there."

S. navy man to demonstrate an escape from a submerged submarine via torpedo tube.

One Man's Opinion

—By WALTER KIERNAN

THE STATE DEPARTMENT has sent out a little round robin to all its employes asking "are you having any fun?"

The way things have been piling up on the poor people it's about time somebody looked into the fun situation.

What with trying to placate two or three kinds of French, keep Spain on the fence, look the other way when the Poles and the Russians exchange insults, tune in for fireside chats and broadcasts from London, there has been little time for jollity in the department.

Things have been getting so dull that some of the indispensable young men have been thinking of surrendering to their draft boards.

It is to be hoped that in the near future Cordell Hull can give a weekly clambake or maybe Sumner Welles will prompt a square dance.

* * *

If that can't be arranged they might get in same famous traveler to tell how she is saving gasoline by riding Pullmans.

Thought for the day: What kind of a war is this if you can't have fun?

EIGHTH ARMY OPENS HEAVY NEW BARRAGE

Huge Allied Armada Said to Be Steaming East From Gibraltar.

greater blows against Nazi invaders.

SOVIET FRONT—Germans attempt drive across Donets river south of Izyum 70 miles below Kharkov; Russians capture "several key enemy positions" in Caucasus.

SOUTHWEST PACIFIC—Gen. Douglas MacArthur discloses Japanese submarine campaign in waters east of Australia; Allied bombers pound enemy island strongholds.

FRENCH ANTILLES — U. S. warships keep vigil off Martinique pending "further developments" in showdown with pro-Vichy regime.

BURMA—RAF warplanes strafe Japanese on Mayu peninsula.

In the battle of North Africa, the Berlin radio's report of an enormous Allied fleet passing eastward through the Gibraltar bottleneck lacked confirmation elsewhere, but touched off speculation on these possibilities:

1. With Tunisian land fighting deadlocked by stiffening German defenses, the fleet might be en route to strike at the enemy rear along the Gulf of Tunis.

2. It might be moving to cut off the line of Axis escape from the North African bridgehead.

3. Or finally, it might even be directed against the enemy's vital supply bases in Sicily and Sardinia.

An Axis dispatch from La Linea, Spain, next door to Gibraltar, said the movement included a huge convoy guarded by the British battleships Rodney and Malaya, the battle cruiser Renown, and the aircraft carriers Furious, Illustrious and Argus along with many escorting vessels.

"Spanish observers are convinced that major action in the Mediterranean is imminent," the broadcast said.

In this connection, it was recalled that Axis radios last year gave the first information on the massing of warships at Gibraltar which preceded the Allied landing in French Morocco.

Meanwhile, American and French troops were reported driving toward the western shores of Lake Achkel, southwest of the big Axis-held naval fortress at Bizerte in northern Tunisia.

Field dispatches said the Americans, beating off furious Nazi counterattacks, were only three miles from the lake, or about 20 miles from Bizerte.

Japs Open Sub Drive To Cut U. S. Shipping

(By United Press)

Japan began a submarine campaign in waters east of Australia today as Japanese spokesmen continued threatening an all-out drive against the Allies in the Pacific.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's communique reported the sub drive that may be aimed at Allied shipping from the United States. Details were withheld. A Tokyo communique claimed the sinking of two Allied transports in the southwestern Pacific late last month.

Maj. Gen. Nakao Yahagi, Japanese army press section chief, broadcast that operations on a "grand scale" were impending. In a speech recorded by the federal communications commission, he said the whole Pacific future would depend on the action.

The sub campaign followed Japanese setbacks in the air and at sea, delivered by MacArthur's fliers guarding the approaches to Australia from the north. They quit throwing planes at Allied outposts two weeks ago after losing about 90 of 220.

10 Enemy Ships Sunk In Mediterranean

LONDON —(AP)— Ten more enemy ships have been sunk in the Mediterranean by British submarines, the admiralty announced today.

Among the ships sunk, said the communique, was a large tanker torpedoed near Marittima Island "while west-bound on a course for Tunis. She was escorted by an unusually large number of surface craft and aircraft."

Another tanker was sunk by gunfire off Italy's west coast and a large ammunition ship was blown up off the Island of Monte Cristo, between Italy and Corsica.

Stalin Hails Allied Aerial Attacks

MOSCOW —(AP)— Premier Joseph Stalin hailed the British-American aerial blows at Europe today as foreshadowing a second front when all the Allied armies "will break the backbone of the Fascist beast" with joint smashes from east and west, and called for the "utter routing" and "unconditional surrender" of Hitler's Germany.

In a May Day order of the day to his nation and its army, Stalin echoed the "unconditional surrender" keynote struck by Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt at their Casablanca conference.

The Russian leader signed the order both as a supreme commander and as marshal, the latter title recently conferred on him for his direction of the Russian winter offensive.

He praised the Allies' campaign on the North African front which, together with the air war, the Russian successes and the failure of the German counteroffensive in the Kharkov region, Stalin said, had caused a great Axis crisis which resulted in a German "babble about peace."

PREPARES BROAD PRICE ROLLBACK

Administration Promises Cuts In Food Charges as Reply to Labor.

are rolled back to the May 15, 1942, levels.

Brown said that he had instructed his staff to put his new program into effect "without delay to the limit of our powers." It presaged another administration attempt to place ceilings on farm commodities—livestock, hogs, cotton, milk for manufacturing purposes, etc.

Brown's emphasis on enforcement marked a change of policy, for he has placed considerable reliance on the "honor system" which has proven such a failure.

His program was recognition of the demands of labor, but nevertheless he denied that the cost of living had far outrun the level of wages as charged by Lewis.

"The simple truth of the matter is that this office is holding as nearly as humanly possible to the principle of the stabilization act of last fall," Brown said. "Our answer to those who assert that we are not holding the cost of living line is that wages in industry, factory and mine have risen amply and sufficiently to cover the inevitable rises in the level of living costs.

"There is no justification for breaking the stabilization program. Let American people join us in holding the line."

He departed from his prepared text to say that OPA investigators surveying prices in the field have reported from Pittsburgh, in the heard of the coal area, that only one instance of violation of a retail price ceiling has been discovered. A more intensive investigation of prices in coal areas is now under way.

He said the coal miners are now earning far more than they made at the time war broke out. In January, average hourly earnings in the bituminous mines were 22 per cent above the average for August, 1939, he said, and, whereas three years ago thousands of miners were laid off frequently, they are now working full time.

"If this wage increase is granted (to the miners), increases cannot be denied to workers in other industries and increased prices cannot be denied to farmers," he said. "I recognize how strong are the claims of the coal miners. Theirs is hard and dangerous work and it is work without which the wheels of industry must falter and stop. But I cannot say too strongly that the coal miners cannot better their position in a race between wages and the cost of living."

Christ Gospel Mission

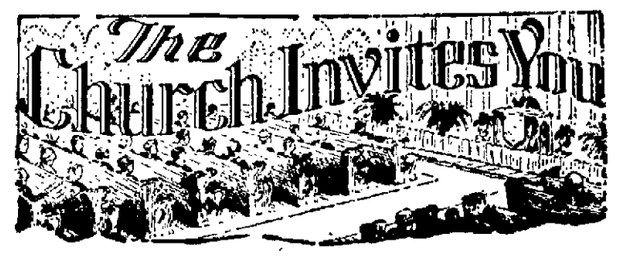
May 2nd to 16th, 1943

Services each evening at 8 o'clock. Saturday services, Sunday afternoon, May 2 - 9 - 16, at 2:30.



His excellency, the most Rev. Michael J. Curley, the archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, says, "In this time of crisis above all, none must forget his obligation to the good God. There is not one of us that can afford to forego worship and prayer. With God's help victory shall be ours, but that victory will be hastened in the measure in which we recognize our need of God's help, of religion and of prayer. If this country is worth fighting for, it is worth working for and by the same token it is worth praying for."

The church is ready as a divine agency to reveal God's grace and strength which is so greatly needed. Why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?

—D. Carl Yoder.

In proportion to its population no country in the world has such a large distribution of the Bible as Norway. With the start of the war the Bible Society had great stocks of Scriptures on hand, but soon orders began to pour in until the number reached last year was 90,000.

A vessel of American citizens including 283 missionaries and 192 missionary children recently landed at New York from the Far East. During the long journey, services, rich in testimony and music, were held each Sunday, collections to the amount of $185.00 having been taken to be divided between the American Bible Society, to provide Bibles for men in service, and the Red Cross.

The largest membership recorded during the 236 years of organized Presbyterianism in this country was reported last week in an analysis of the total figures of that denomination for the year ended last March. A net increase of members during that year, aggregating 27,245 over last year's total of 2,013,247, indicates persons in active communicant standing, not in ordinary church population. Including the latter, the Presbyterian population nears 5,000,000. A nine-year record in church giving was broken with contributions by the 8,674 churches totaling $44,758,104, an amount unequaled since 1933.

In stature we may be no taller at fifty than at twenty, but in spirit we should be giants by then, if ever at all.

I have found clean spark plugs essential to the best automobile engine action. I have found a clear and clean conscience necessary for the best soul action. Often the conscience needs an operation such as takes place when an open confession of a wrong done is made. Noble confession makes the conscience clean.

Fits of Freezing.

Confusion, fits and frenzies are in the trail of all kinds of rationing. An observer in thinking what might not be rationed said: "Speaking of frozen styles in clothing, we agree with the Wall Street Journal that there will be little change in men's pockets this year.

And there won't be much change in masculine attire for women. We don't see how it could be made to look worse."

MRS. W. E. BENNINGHOFF GIVES BOOK REVIEW

Cleveland Reviewer of Books Concludes Series Presented in Mansfield With William Saroyan's "The Human Comedy."

MRS. W. E. BENNINGHOFF, Cleveland, reviewed "The Human Comedy" by William Saroyan last night, concluding a series of book reviews she has given in Mansfield under the auspices of the Women's Association of the First Congregational church. The review was given at the First Presbyterian church.

Mrs. Benninghoff explained that Saroyan himself described "The Human Comedy" as a series of vignettes, each a story in itself, but pointed out that he has skilfully drawn the vignettes together so as to form a well-knit, complete story.

Quoting the dialog of the book verbatim at times, Mrs. Benninghoff graphically described the various members of the Macauley family, around whom "The Human Comedy" is written.

It can be inferred, the reviewer stated, that much of the story, especially that part revolving around 14-year-old Homer Macauley, is the story of Saroyan's own youth. Like Homer, Saroyan was a messenger boy in California, the setting of the story, and many of Homer's experiences parallel those of Saroyan.

Each of the four Macauley children, from Ulysses, who is four, to Marcus, who appears in the story only indirectly by virtue of the fact that he is in the army, is a strong and interesting character and the story of their home life, centering around their understanding and widowed mother, reflects a pleasant and fascinating family.

In the end, Marcus is killed, but Tobey, his best friend in the army, comes to the Macauley home to take his place, having found through conversation with Marcus that to be happy he must be one of them, not only because he is in love, sight unseen, with Marcus' sister, Bess, but because, never having had a family life of his own, he feels he must share in the kind of life the Macauleys lead.

In their typical manner, the Macauleys take Tobey in.

Mrs. Charles Fox, president of the association, introduced Mrs. Benninghoff and announced that plans were being made for another series of reviews in the fall.

FELLOWSHIP CLASS.

Rev. and Mrs. R. W. Taubenheim entertained members of the Fellowship class of the Evangelical Congregational Sunday school at their home, 44 Maple place. The business meeting was conducted by the president, Albert Keckler. Devotions were read by Mrs. D. E. Stuckey. Luncheon was served by the hostess at the close of the social evening. The place of the May 27 meeting will be announced at a later date.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

My father's question flicked me to alert attention.

"Hayes," I said; "John Hayes—Ruth Hayes. Oh, that is—"

"Stretching the long arm of coincidence until it snaps at the elbow," my father finished with a grim smile. "I know—and, I may be mistaken, but I think it is a possibility you will have to consider.

"He did not confide any detail of his errand to me, but he is terribly anxious to see you as soon as possible. Can you talk to him now?"

"He is here?" I asked, a bit startled.

"He is in the next suite," he said, "but I would prefer to have you talk to him in here. Katharine will stay in the bedroom, and I will be in the other suite within call. You probably will wish to summon me for consultation. Now, how soon can you see him?"

"Give me one minute to get my things hung up in the closet," I said, "then bring him along."

"I'll get him at once," my father said, and started for the other suite.

Katharine in High Spirits.

"I'll take refuge in the bathroom until your father comes back with his quarry," Katharine whispered, "then go into the bedroom. Leave the door slightly ajar so I'll be within reach if you need me. I'd like a box seat at the performance, anyway."

There was a lightness in her manner which I had not seen for a long time, and I knew my message from Jack that she might come to the hideaway had given a fillip to her spirits.

But I had no time for sympathy, or to share her jubilation, and uttered only a mechanical "Fine," as I hurried to hang up my hat and coat. When I turned around she had gone, and I sat down and waited tensely for my father's return with John Hayes.

Meets John Hayes.

Within a minute I heard the camouflaged door open, and my father came in with the young actor.

"Mr. Hayes wishes to talk to you, Margaret," he said. "I have some work to do in the other suite, but if you wish me to come back, just knock on the door."

As soon as my father left, young Hayes rushed over and seized the hand I held out to him. He did not kiss it, as Steve Redfield, in his cheap imitation of the courtly manner of foreign-bred men, would have done, but his grip was so strong that I winced. Seeing this, he loosed his grasp as if my hand had suddenly turned to a hot coal.

"Oh!" he exclaimed in chagrined contrition, "I have hurt you! I am so—"

"Indeed you haven't hurt me in the least," I said. "Sit down," indicating a chair opposite mine, "and tell me what is on your mind."

Redfield's Understudy.

I had not seen him in weeks, but decided quickly that my favorable impression when I first met him was justified. For he is a handsome lad in his early twenties, a trifle shorter and slighter than Stephen Redfield, but of more engaging personality, and lacking the exotic quality, so repugnant to discriminating souls, which makes Steve the idol of his public.

Yet the finely cut, regular features of this younger man, with his unusual combination of fair hair and brown eyes, his singularly engaging smile and manner, made a combination which, I decided, could match Redfield's attraction. He also, to use Mary's phrase, was "God's gift to women."

But his smile was not in evidence now, and his brown eyes—too beautiful for a man, I thought—were troubled, as he leaned forward tensely and said:

"I am afraid you will think me unpardonably intrusive when I tell you what is on my mind."

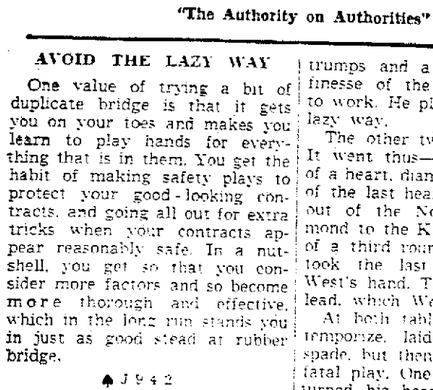
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

AVOID THE LAZY WAY

One value of trying a bit of duplicate bridge is that it gets you on your toes and makes you learn to play hands for everything that is in them. You get the habit of making safety plays to protect your good-looking contracts, and going all out for extra tricks when your contracts appear reasonably safe. In a nutshell, you get so that you consider more factors and so become more thorough and effective, which in the long run stands you in just as good stead at rubber bridge.



(Dealer, North. East-West vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
1 ♦	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

In rubber bridge, most players with that South hand would have jumped to 4-Spades after hearing North raise, but that made no particular difference, as all the Souths in a duplicate reached the game one way or another. At three tables where the hand was watched, West led the heart 2. The first of three declarers barely made his contract, losing two trumps and a club because the finesse of the latter suit failed to work. He played the hand the lazy way.

The other two did a neat job. It went thus—the heart A, ruff of a heart, diamond to the A, ruff of the last heart to get that suit out of the North hand, a diamond to the K and then the ruff of a third round diamond, which took the last diamond out of West's hand. Then came a spade lead, which West won.

At both tables, West then, to temporize, laid down his other spade, but then had to make the fatal play. One of the Wests returned his hearte Q, whereupon a club was discarded from the dummy, the trick being ruffed in the South. The club A, a ruffed club, a ruffed diamond and then the dummy's last trumps completed the hand.

At the other table, after West took his second spade, he led a club, hoping his partner had the Q or A, but he did not, so the extra was made also by that declarer.

Your Week-End Lesson.

In the new Laws of Contract Bridge, new provisions have been made regarding the following matters:

1. Who has the right to condone an irregularity in bidding or play, or to select a penalty?

2. The right to require the lead of a specified suit?

3. Correction of an insufficient bid?

Are you familiar with these important changes? They will be summarized Monday.

Mrs. Julia Kiene Guest Speaker at Garden Club Meet

Mrs. Julia Kiene, of the home economics department at the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, was a guest speaker, Friday afternoon, at the luncheon meeting, the first of the season held by members of the Mansfield Garden Study club, at the home of Mrs. E. J. Gilbert, 86 Sturges avenue.

Assisting Mrs. Gilbert at the meeting were Mrs. J. S. Hattery and Mrs. George A. Mead, who presided at the luncheon table, which was centered with a clever arrangement of pansies.

In her talk, "Vegetables for Canning and Freezing," Mrs. Kiene told of the preparation of victory gardens for planting. She mentioned planning systems, care of the garden from insects, harvesting of crops and the types of vegetables which are best suited for canning and those best suited for freezing.

The business meeting was in charge of Mrs. Ephriam Brown, president.

Mrs. Alfred M. Colby will present the program at the next meeting, scheduled for May 7, when she gives a book review. The meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. E. R. Hartman, 121 Marion avenue. Assisting Mrs. Hartman will be Mrs. J. A. Rigby and Mrs. Louis Bromfield.

THEATERS

Bond Sellers.

Before beginning work on their new Universal picture, Damon Runyon's "It Ain't Hay," starting today at the Ohio, Bud Abbott and Lou Costello visited 78 cities and 101 war production plants in the course of 34 days on a war bond sale tour. The tour was probably the most intensive ever staged by Hollywood personalities. The Treasury department figures on the whirlwind drive credited Bud and Lou with garnering $85,000,000 in bond and stamp sales. The comics current film is regarded as one of their funniest. It has a supporting cast which includes Grace McDonald, Cecil Kellaway, Eugene Pallette, Patsy O'Connor and Richard Lane.

Singing Star.

Dennis Day, singer of Jack Benny's radio program, makes his second screen appearance in "The Powers Girl," song-and-dance film produced by Charles R. Rogers which opens today at the Madison. Dennis' role of the "candid-camera fiend" who would rather take pictures than sing, closely parallels the naive character he has popularized on the Jack Benny program. In this film, he sings three hit tunes with Benny Goodman's band that were specially written for him. Carole Landis, George Murphy and Anne Shirley are the featured players in the picture. William Bendix and Grace Bradley team up in the Madison's other attraction, "Taxi, Mister."

Tarzan Triumphs.

"Tarazn Triumphs," first of Sol Lesser's new series for RKO based on Edgar Rice Burrough's stories, has as its theme a plot that brings the present war into the wilds of Africa. Starring Johnny Weissmuller, "Tarzan Triumphs" shows that fictional hero as one who has no interest in the war at first. This attitude continues until the Germans invade the jungle to enslave the people that are peacefully living there. It is then that Tarzan makes war. The co-attraction is "Behind the 8-Ball." The Ritz Brothers are starred in this film.

Vallee's Spree.

Rudy Vallee is the answer to any woman's prayer in the Paramount comedy romance, "The Palm Beach Story," now showing at the Ritz with Claudette Colbert and Joel McCrea. Vallee appears as the richest young man in the world and when Claudette meets him she has nothing to wear but a pair of man-sized pajamas. He rectifies that by providing her with a wardrobe covering several thousand dollars — and no strings attached to any of it. Roy Rogers is the star of the second picture, the singing cowboy playing top role with Peggy Moran.

Gibbs Cabin Scene of Garden Club Meeting

Mrs. H. W. Gibbs and Mrs. Clay Noel entertained members of the Town and Country Garden club Friday afternoon at the Gibbs cabin near Mansfield, when Mrs. W. L. Old, a former member of the club, who has recently returned to this city, was welcomed back into membership.

Seventeen members and one guest, Mrs. H. Wayne Hoffman, were present at the meeting. Mrs. Hoffman presided at the table when luncheon was served. The refreshment table was centered with an attractive arrangement of spring flowers.

Mrs. Ralph Emerson, the president, presided at a brief business meeting. Members of the club devoted part of the afternoon to sewing for the Red Cross. The rest of the afternoon was spent in the study of wild flowers.

Mrs. Paul Lee gave an interesting and informative talk on "Diseases and Bugs In the Garden."

Mrs. R. W. Stevens and Mrs. Kenneth Woodman will be hostesses at the next meeting scheduled for the garden club. That meeting will be held May 14 instead of May 21, as was previously announced. The place of the meeting will be made known at a later date.

Luncheon Meet Held at Home of Mrs. Ray Hammer

Hostess for a 1 o'clock luncheon Friday, for members of the Linneaus Garden club, was Mrs. Ray Hammer, Dickson Parkway, whose guest for the afternoon was Mrs. Sherrard. Fifteen members were in attendance at the luncheon meeting.

When luncheon was served, the table was decorated with an arrangement of flowering cherry and magnolia blossoms.

Mrs. I. D. Wallington gave the paper of the afternoon. She spoke on "Weeds and Their Eradication." In her talk, Mrs. Wallington told of uses of roots and herbs.

Mrs. Henry J. Paulson, the club's president, told of garden center activities. She stated that there were 350 people contacted for lots in which to plant victory gardens.

The conservation chairman, Mrs. S. E. Taylor stressed the need of raising herbs for food flavoring since spices and other seasoning isn't available.

Mrs. Wallington, Wellington avenue, will entertain at the next meeting of the club, scheduled for May 14.

Beans, the traditional Army food, reached a U. S. production record in 1941 of 18,226,000 hundred-pound bags.

HOROSCOPE

For Sunday, May 2.

Sunday's horoscope holds auguries of particularly lively and happy conditions, favoring eagerness and enterprise. Ecclesiastic matters and benefits for and by elders may be well stimulated, while professional, affectional and cultural engagements may gratify. But there may be danger of overdoing and lavish spending or indulgence. Be prudent.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of splendid openings for putting the affairs upon a flourishing, expansive and enduring basis, mainly through industry and astute judgment. Aim at security in worldly affairs and for happy foundations in romantic or social life.

For Monday, May 3.

Monday's astrological forecast is for a particularly active and aggressive state of affairs, with high goals of major significance as the incentive. Maintain poise, composure, self-control in excitable moments, and ask favors if necessary.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves well established in a year of happy auspices for putting over ambitious objectives or new projects, with aggressive and well-directed action and lucrative culminations if they insist on keeping down excessive tension, avoid high pressure methods and don't attempt to force mighty issues. Explosion, ill-temper and all sorts of emotional excesses might defeat worthy purpose.

1st, 2nd Grades At Country Day Present Assembly

The first and second grades at Country Day school presented an assembly Friday at 2 o'clock for their parents and friends. The theme of the assembly was "Community Life," which the two grades have been studying during the year.

The program consisted of two selections played on the "tune bells.' They were "America" and "Long, Long Ago." Both grades participated. Betsy Kirtley, Mickey Rupp and Suzanne Cummins, second graders, told about the Cave and Lake people, including travel on land, the story of boats, clothing and food in comparison with our life today.

The first grade students, Judy Maxwell, Paula Weir, Hutch Stevens, George Kirtley and Leo DeLaney presented a movie, which the whole group helped to make, called "Our Helpers." They told about each picture, as it was shown. A quiz, conducted by Betsy Kirtley, ended the program.

Each selection was announced by Suzanna Cummins, the chairman.

On display, were booklets which the children have made during their study; paintings, a village made in the sandbox and a large map of the village.

Gamma Chapter Hears Talk by Miss Betty Austin

Miss Patricia Stuhldrehrer, 222 Lexington avenue, entertained members of the Zeta Chapter of Gamma Gamma Gamma sorority recently when Miss Betty Austin, a representative of the local chapter of the American Red Cross, was a guest speaker. Miss Austin stressed the need of Mansfield's young women enrolling in the nurses aide courses at the Red Cross.

Bridge was played during the evening, by sorority members. Prizes for high scores were won by Miss Ethel Mae Bogan and Miss Marjorie Scott.

At the close of the evening, luncheon was served at a long table attractively decorated with red white and blue appointments and favors.

Mrs. Marjorie Harmony will entertain at the May 12 meeting, at her home, 189 Euclid avenue.

Mrs. Ruth Orcutt Entertains Club At Nature Party

A nature party with an old fashioned "poke lunch" was enjoyed by members of the Garden Study club, when they held an all day meeting Friday at the home of Mrs. Ruth Orcutt.

Thirteen members and one guest, Mrs. Robert Williams were in attendance, and spent the morning in nature study. The picnic luncheon was served at noon before an open fireplace in the cottage. Individual tables were centered with daffodil arrangements.

The business meeting in the afternoon was presided over by the president, Mrs. L. E. Strain.

Mrs. D. E. Patterson presented the topic for the day. She spoke of the identification and preservation of wild flowers. Mrs. Patterson exhibited specimens of wild flowers and conducted an open discussion in which club members participated.

Mrs. Gilmore Hiett, 152 Rae avenue will entertain club members at the May 14 meeting. She will be assisted by Mrs. William Nusbaum. Mrs. L. D. Bowers will, at that time, give a review of "The World Is My Garden." There will also be a plant exchange at that meeting.

FDR COMMANDS U. S. OPERATION OF COAL MINES

Orders Army to Provide Guard For Workers as Ickes Takes Control.

of coal in the face of the most crippling industrial strike since the outbreak of war came shortly after the White House had announced that he would take the government's case against John L. Lewis' coal miners to the nation in a radio broadcast at 10 o'clock EWT tomorrow night.

In that address, the White House said, President Roosevelt would "speak bluntly on the need of coal to win the war."

The president had told John L. Lewis, president of the miners union, that if coal was not coming from the pits by 10 o'clock Saturday morning he would "use all the power vested in me as president and as commander-in-chief of the army and navy to protect the national interest" and to keep the miners at work.

The president earlier conferred with his closest advisers.

He remained in his personal study at the White House and after the conference, Robert Sherwood, playwright and author, who collaborates with Mr. Roosevelt on his public statements and speeches, remained behind, presumably, aiding him in preparing the radio speech for tomorrow.

Meanwhile there were indications that there would be conferences during the day with Lewis.

There were reports from New York that he hurriedly had left his hotel there and there was much speculation that he was on his way to Washington and very likely would come to the White House.

A conference between Lewis and Mr. Roosevelt was the only prospect of a quick settlement or truce in the industry crippling walkout of the nation's hard and soft coal miners.

Risking immediate declaration of martial law and use of army troops, Lewis, without so much as raising his voice, let the strike occur in defiance of an ultimatum by President Roosevelt that all mines must be operating at 10 o'clock this morning.

The union's contracts covering 450,000 soft coal miners and some 90,000 workers in the anthracite pits expired at midnight, and the UMW "boss" permitted the general walkout to go on because coal operators had refused to sign new contracts. This was in line with the UMW policy of "no contract—no work."

Beginning of the general strike was no surprise! During the past week, more than 100,000 miners began "silent strikes" in four states to back up Lewis' demands for a $2-a-day wage increase. When no new contracts were signed by the time the old ones expired at midnight, the number of mine workers who walked out increased by leaps and bounds.

If the arrival of the soldiers in coal mining communities leads to riots and gunfire, maintenance crews of the mines were expected to join the general walkout. This would mean that pumps in the mines would not be manned and the pits would be flooded. It would require a month or 10 weeks to put the diggings back into production again. That was one of Lewis' trump cards in his showdown with the president.

Lewis actually had "called" the general strike at 11:45 a. m., yesterday after the meeting with his policy committee. It came when he told the president that the miners wanted a work agreement.

OPA Inspectors Check Miners' Living Costs

CLEVELAND —(UP)— The regional office of price administration announced today that 69 inspectors have been sent into Ohio, West Virginia and Kentucky coal fields to investigate charges that miners' living costs are abnormally high.

Ten inspectors were sent from regional headquarters to assist 11 regular inspectors at the Wheeling, W. Va., district OPA office. The 18 inspectors at Charleston, W. Va., were regarded as sufficient to handle that district.

OPA officials said the inspectors would check prices of staple food commodities sold by company-owned and other stores in the coal communities of the strike areas.

Repudiate No-Strike Pledge In Illinois

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. —(INS)— Two thousand six hundred Illinois members of the Progressive Mine Workers of America (AFL) today repudiated pledges of their state and national leaders not to strike, and joined members of the United Mine Workers in refusing to trespass coal company property.

The 2,600 miners are members of locals No. 1 at Gillespie, and No. 18 at Staunton. The Gillespie unit, with 2,000 members, is the largest Progressive local in the state.

Decision of the two groups not to return to work today followed by only a few hours a meeting of several hundred Progressive union delegates to a state policy convention at which it was voted to stand by President Roosevelt and not join the walkout.

All Ohio Soft Coal Mines Shut Down

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Adolph Pacifico, vice president of District 6, United Mine Workers, reported today a complete work stoppage in Ohio soft coal mines and said the men wouldn't return to the pits until an agreement is reached in their demand for higher pay.

Pacifico estimated 20,000 miners in eastern and southern Ohio had joined those in other states in quitting work.

"The men know their contract expired at midnight and they will not trespass on company property," he told interviewers at Bellaire. "They are anxious to work as soon as an agreement is reached" with the operators.

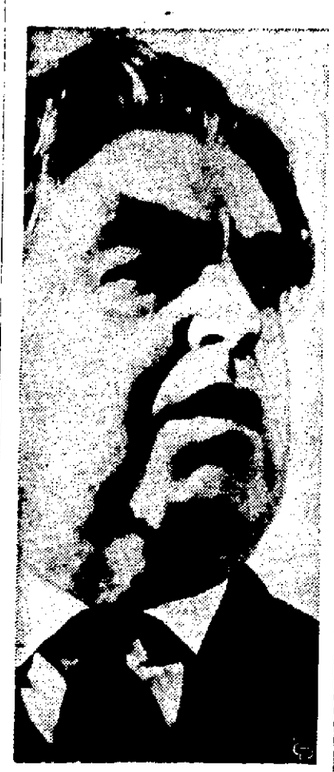
Several thousand miners failed to report for work yesterday, while those on night shifts turned in their lamps at midnight and went home, Pacifico reported.

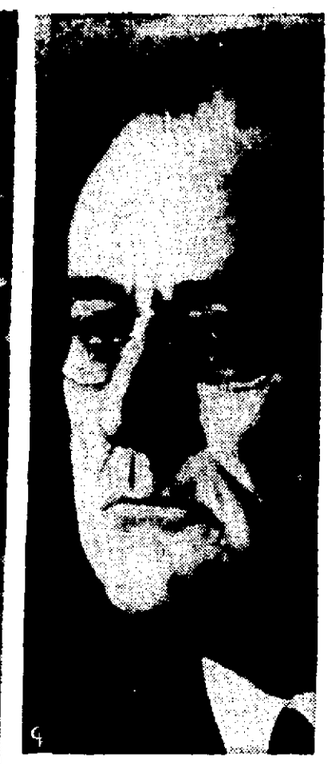
Steel Firms Have 30-Day Coal Supply

CLEVELAND — (AP) — The magazine Steel said today it would report in its edition Monday that stoppage of work in bituminous coal mines found the steel industry with an average of 30 days' supply of fuel, although some units have only enough for 10 days.

"A continued mine stoppage would bring progressive shutdowns as supplies become exhausted," the magazine said.

As Miners Bow to Lewis, Defy Roosevelt In Coal Strike





Shaggy-browed John L. Lewis today faced the full power of the United States government. The belligerent head of the United Mine Workers, shown left above, placed more than a half a million soft coal miners on strike at midnight last night, paralyzing the nation's soft coal production and threatening to cripple U. S. war industries. Typical of the miners who bowed to Lewis' orders last night is John Timchak, shown at center, a miner for the last 44 years in the Red Lion mine in Fayette county, Pennsylvania. He is shown checking out as the mine shut down. Looking grim, at right, is President Roosevelt who at noon today ordered Secretary of Interior Ickes to take over the struck mines and provide soldier protection for the men who wanted to work.

THREE KILLED AT CROSSING

clothing was ignited but the flames were extinguished soon afterward by passing motorists.

Thornberry's brother and a friend were unknowingly following the automobile in another car only a short distance behind. They were the first to reach the scene.

The crossing is not protected by flasher signals but reflectors are posted there to warn motorists.

The crash boosted to eight the number of persons killed in highway accidents in the county so far this year. At the same time last year only three persons had been killed.

Thornberry said he had loaned his car to his brother earlier in the evening. He had seen the trio in Shelby while he was visiting his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Denton Gregory. The trio left shortly before Thornberry and his companion started for home in another car.

He estimated that he was driving less than a mile behind the vehicle.

On arriving at the crossing, they found the two youths had been tossed from the car, one out each of the front doors.

The girl was pinned inside, Thornberry said. Several other motorists aided in releasing her from the wreckage.

Thornberry was dead when an ambulance arived. The other two, were rushed to the Shelby hospital, Millican expiring on the way while Mrs. Harness died soon after arriving there.

Thornberry, a native of Moorehead, Ky., was employed at the Mansfield Tire and Rubber company. He is survived by his brother, his father, Robert Thornberry, and a sister, Mrs. Gregory.

Millican, a native of Cullman, Ala., is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jawhew, Cullman, Ala., and two sisters, Mrs. Dural Runge, 226 Park avenue east, and Mrs. Naomi Blowers, 151 West Third street.

Both bodies were removed to the Barkdull funeral home in Shelby.

Mrs. Harness was born in Oregon, O., and came to Mansfield several years ago. She is survived by her husband, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Canter, Roseland; a sister, Hazel Haiesik, Mansfield; two brothers, Warren and Lewis Canter, both in the Navy, and her grandparents, John Canter, Lancaster, and Mrs. Elizabeth Bishop, Dundas, O. Her body was removed to the Finefrock mortuary pending funeral arrangements.

Willard Crash Injuries Fatal

WILLARD—Injured in an automobile collision here yesterday, Leo Drumbarger, 40, died in municipal hospital three hours later.

Drumbarger's car, Police Chief Leroy Riddle said, collided with an automobile driven by Wayne Mayer, 17, at the intersection of South Clark and East Tiffin streets.

Drumbarger was thrown from the machine and crushed against the curb. The youth was not held but will be questioned further today by police.

Surviving are Drumbarger's widow, Jewell, and a sister, Mrs. Norris Rowan, Willard.

Funeral service will be conducted at 2:30 p. m. Monday at the Secor funeral home. Rev. G. C. Heffelfinger, pastor of the Trinity Lutheran church, will officiate. Burial will be in Goodwill cemetery near New Washington.

URGES OHIO TO PLAN FOR PEACE

Atkinson Wants Enterprises Ready With Jobs For War Workers.

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS — Herschel C. Atkinson, administrator of the Ohio Bureau of Unemployment compensation,, declared today "post-war planning is a new challenge to an Ohio that has never failed yet to do a job realistically and soundly, for the good of her people."

Atkinson addressed a post-war public works planning conference sponsored by the Ohio Foundation, an organization established by the International Union of Operating Engineers, Local No. 18, and dedicated "to aid in every manner the furtherance of needed public work programs during the present, post-war and future eras."

"I suggest," said Atkinson in his prepared address, "that when our war industries shut down, there are new enterprises that could absorb their producing facilities and use their labor. But it will take planning and development and support by the whole people.

"And the private enterprise must give to the public planning its fullest confidence and support in mapping the social and public works programs which will take care of the needs of the people in the event that private enterprise fails to fully meet the obligation.

"Our people are entitled to be properly housed, properly clothed, properly fed, and to live in good health and be free from the fear of commitment to maintenance on a government dole or subsidy."

Atkinson said unemployment insurance "is a stop-gap in our social system and we need to be broad enough in our thinking to fit it in its proper groove."

D. O. Taber, conference chairman, asserted Ohio should take the lead in planning peace-time activities "since Gov. John W. Bricker is chairman of a 14-state post-war planning group under the auspices of the council of state governments."

fronts more effectively, Davis said, than any number of enemy submarines.

"German submarines haven't stopped our supplies but John L. Lewis may stop them; and if he does, it will make quite a difference to the men who are conquering Tunisia foot by foot," he said.

"How can the Americans ever win, ask the Japanese broadcasters—how can they ever win if their people quit work and refuse to build weapons of war. Well, that's quite a question. Maybe John L. Lewis knows the answer."

Japs Say Strike Proves Disunity

(By Associated Press)

The Nippon Times, Japanese foreign office organ, declared editorially today that the United States coal strike was "a direct challenge to governmental power in wartime and something that is inconceivable in Japan, where everyone is putting his shoulder to the wheel."

Excerpts of the editorial were broadcast by the Tokyo radio and recorded by the Associated Press.

"Roosevelt was vacillating in his negotiations with 'he labor leader," the Nippon Times editorial added, according to radio Tokyo. This was attributed to "fourth term" aspirations.

"The seriousness of the situation is at once clear from the prediction already made by American steel companies that if a general strike of coal miners were called, they would have to seriously curtail steel production within two weeks," the broadcast editorial added.

"A strike of such proportions, nevertheless, is incontestible, proof that there is no unity in the United States regarding the prosecution of the war. That, however, is not strange when the masses in the United States still are in the wilderness regarding the real war aims of the government."
